The Size of The Prize - Building a Domestic Battery Metals Supply Chain

January 15, 2021 -- Time: 1 pm Mountain Time

Presented by: Chris Berry

Webinar via Zoom

Chris Berry will cover the following topics:

1. Why rebuild domestic supply chains? Jobs and industrial self-sufficiency are key factors here?
2. Availability of US reserves to critical metals/import dependence.
3. Discussion of how much lithium/cobalt/copper/nickel will be needed for certain Electric Vehicle (EV) penetration rates and what this means for metals, etc.
4. What does a Biden Administration mean for the domestic battery metals industry?
5. What is happening in this regard in the European Union and China?
6. How can US industry compete?
7. How has COVID accelerated changes to supply chains?

Presenter: Chris Berry - President of House Mountain Partners, LLC

Chris has been an independent analyst since 2009 with a focus on Energy Metals supply chains including lithium, cobalt, graphite, nickel, copper, vanadium, and rare earths.

His advisory work provides strategic insights to asset managers, banks, corporates and academia and has a specific focus on how strategic metals supply chains are evolving to create opportunities and threats. Before shifting focus to analysis of these trends, Chris gained twelve years of capital markets experience on both the buy side and sell side.

He has visited and performed economic analysis of metals deposits on six continents and has been featured in multiple media outlets including the Financial Times, The Wall Street Journal, the South China Morning Post and CNN International.

Chris holds a Master of Business Administration in finance with an international focus from Fordham University, and a Bachelor of Arts in international studies from The Virginia Military Institute.
